It is impossible to interfere with the movements of the planets. These movements reflect upon the cyclical evolution of the whole cosmos, including the cultural and political transformations around our globe. Thus, the global political cycles are developmental, unstoppable, and irreversible, and they cannot be turned sideways. Armed with the knowledge of such an inevitable future, we can still take actions to modify the course of events, as well as their outcomes, as long as we work with the world's developmental trends rather than against them. This website has been designed to liberate you from unnecessary worries and anxieties about future economic and/or political crises, that will never happen, and alert you to those that will.

The future is predictable though never in all details. We may succeed in accurately forecasting many future events, yet some of them will still surprise and astonish us.

It is the author's greatest hope that this book it will attract the attention of our politicians and industry leaders positioned to use the knowledge of the planetary cycles to make our country and the world a better and safer place.
